Interpretation of the Seismic Reflection Survey at Teels ...

The basic issue in seismic reflection interpretation is the conversion of the measured two way time into depth. Although the two way time (TWT) is known (measured), still there are two unknown parameters; these are: depth and velocity. Velocity is considered as the parameter that most affects the conversion of ...

The seismic dependency describes that seismic properties dependent on the geology. During a classification independent geological properties are determined by dependent seismic properties. A logical reasoning from the dependent seismic properties to the geological properties can lead to ambiguous interpretations.
